

The UCT Disability Service works towards the removal of any physical, policy, information and attitude barriers that might prevent students and staff from fulfilling their potential.

In addition to promoting physical access, such as this wheelchair access guide, the Disability Service supports equitable access for disabled members of the UCT community in the following ways:

- Advocacy and advice on any issues related to disability
- Consultative and counselling support
- Advising on academic adjustments and reasonable accommodations and providing specific services
- Resource centre: literature and material relating to disability studies and disability research available to all staff and students
- Reading material in accessible format including Braille, large print and electronic format
- Providing technical assistance and access to assistive technology
- Facilitation of examination accommodations for disabled students.

In this way the Disability Service is the sounding board, knowledge base and benchmark which assists the University to respond appropriately to current and prospective students, staff and visitors with disabilities.
